Queen Elizabeth II

How Did She Become Queen?

She was never supposed to become Queen because her father had an older brother who was the first in line to the throne.

However, her uncle (King Edward VIII) gave up the throne because he wanted to marry someone who was divorced. This was frowned upon by the Royal Family so he couldn't stay a king.

After that, her father became King. His title was King George VI.

Sadly, in 1952, while Elizabeth was away in Kenya, King George VI died. As a result, she came home immediately and was greeted as Queen! She was 25 years old.

Her coronation was over a year later, on 2nd June 1953. There was lots to plan and organise!
